Sir Mike Tomlinson
with Hackney primary school children

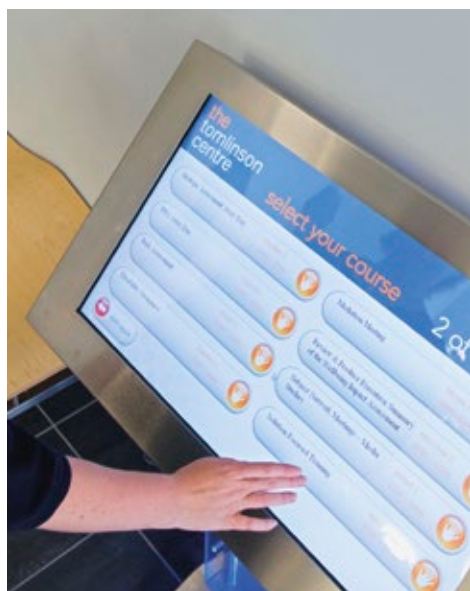

The Tomlinson Centre

Our vision is to be the first venue of choice for educational settings, businesses, organisations and the local community.

The Tomlinson Centre has been specifically designed to offer modern, flexible and fully serviced facilities suitable for a wide range of staff training and development activities.

The Tomlinson Centre is part of the London Borough of Hackney's Libraries, Venues and Events portfolio. The building was opened in 2009 as part of the council's commitment to provide excellent professional development and training facilities to support staff working in education and children's services in Hackney.

The Tomlinson Centre is named in honour of Sir Mike Tomlinson CBE. A former chief inspector of schools and chair of The Learning Trust between 2002 and 2007, Sir Mike created a lasting legacy of higher standards in education both in Hackney and in England. It is primarily due to his commitment and drive that the centre was built.

Room information

Whether you are running a training session or holding a seminar/conference, The Tomlinson Centre has a room to suit your requirements.
